Onich is a small village of very little importance but considerable beauty on the shores of Loch Linnhe. The district is one of the chief centres for the crofters, a class of small tenants sometimes possessing a small farm, the grievances of whom have at many times formed the subject of Parliamentary inquiry.

Dear Miss Bull!
Many thanks for your postal and I am glad, that you liked that view I had sent you and here is a nother one from a farm, but it is not a very nice one. I see, that I can sent you a view from Switzerland next time. Best regards from your friend Minnie Krammer.
